– Disaster prevention —

Japan is a country that has many earthquakes. Using the Hanshin-Awaji Earthquake as an invaluable lesson in which a great many precious lives and property were lost in an instant, it is important to be prepared mentally and materially for an earthquake, no matter where or when it happens so that losses can be kept to a minimum.

HYOGO EMERGENCY NET

About the Hyogo Emergency Net (E-Net) The Hyogo E-Net is a system designed to utilize current trends in mobile and wireless information technology in order to supplement conventional systems for disaster management, such as radio and loudspeaker vans, which directly supply local citizens in the most immediate manner possible.

Please register yourself at the website: http://bosai.net/e/. You will then receive messages containing information regarding emergencies, earthquakes, tsunamis, and weather warnings from Hyogo Prefecture and Cities.

For everyday affairs, this site serves as a regular mobile phone homepage, providing local citizens with information on upcoming events and useful information on daily-life including pictures.

The Hyogo E-net was designed based on the lessons learned through the experiences of the Great Hanshin-Awaji Earthquake. We believe that this network will help us create safer and more secure communities in Ashiya, Hyogo.

Everyday measures

(1) Check where the safest place in your house/apartment is.

(2) Store enough drinking water 3liters per person per day.

(3) Prepare a rucksack or emergency bag and store it in a place familiar to everyone in the family. Example of items to put in or set up with the rucksack/emergency bag:

(a) torch light (b) batteries (c) drinking water and food (d) money (including some 10 yen coins for using a public telephone) (e) copies of identification materials such as passports driver's license and bankbooks, etc. and other valuables (f) matches lighter and candles (g) a first-aid kit (those requiring regular medication should not forget it) (h) a helmet or other protective headwear (i) cotton work gloves, socks and underwear (j) heat insulating and water proof blankets (k) rope, etc.

(4) Use metal fittings to secure furniture and prevent it from falling over.

(5) Use shatter-prevention film on windows, cupboards shelves, etc. where glass is used.

(6) Make a note of emergency contact telephone numbers, and the phone number address and other contact details of someone who can communicate in your language.

(7) Confirm where your nearest emergency shelter and hospital are and how to get there. Inquire at city office to confirm the whereabouts of your nearest emergency shelter.

Saigai-yo Dengon Dial (Telephone message service in times of disaster)(Tel.171) When a disaster occurs it is often difficult to make telephone calls to the affected area. In such circumstances use the Saigai-yo Dengon Dial service (telephone message service in times of disaster). People outside the area can listen to recorded messages made by those in the affected area regarding their safety, etc. It is like a voice recorded message board. Similarly people outside the area can send messages to people in the affected area. Notification of the introduction of the NTT Saigai-yo Dengon Dial service will be made on the radio, television, and internet, etc. You use the service by dialing 171 and following the guidance in Japanese to record or listen to messages.

Being prepared for typhoons and floods In Japan from summer through autumn there are many typhoons that bring strong winds and torrential rain, which can cause landslides and flood damage. To be prepared for such strong winds and floods the following points should be given attention.

(1) Your residence should be fully inspected. In order to keep damage to a minimum, repairs and reinforcements should be carried out.

(2) Window glass, etc. should be reinforced with gummed tape or vinyl tape. If there are shutters they should be closed.

(3) Boxes, flowerpots and other objects in the garden or on the balcony should be fastened or taken into the house to prevent them from being blown around by strong winds.

(4) Television antennas, etc. should be reinforced with splints, wire, etc.

(5) Clear drains and water tubs of any dirt and debris to ensure good drainage.

(6) If you live in a lowland area or in an area where flooding is possible, you should place furniture and electrical appliances as high up as possible.

(7) In the event of a blackout (electric power failure) have a flashlight, portable radio, etc. in a set place familiar to each member of the family.

(8) Rucksack or emergency bag which keep things you need to take with you in an emergency in a convenient place to pick up.

(9) Confirm where the nearest disaster shelter is and how to get there. Confirm whether or not your residence is in a safe district. Inquire infomation to city office, fire department etc concerning the location disaster shelters and the threat of heavy rain-induced landslides in certain areas.
